

VAERS

Vaccine Adverse Event Reporting System

- a program for vaccine safety
co-managed by the US CDC & FDA

- 1) If you or a loved one has been injured, has had any severity of side effects, or has died as a suspected result of any vaccination, your doctor is required by law to report this to VAERS. Most doctors don't even know about this law.¹
- 2) You can also file a report to VAERS yourself.
- 3) The reporting process takes some time and is involved, but it is important to make sure it gets done, even for relatively minor complaints, but definitely for serious ones. CDC follows up on some reports.
- 4) It is estimated that the adverse events that are reported are only 1% - 10% of the actual adverse events occurring.²
- 5) For Covid inoculations, here are the latest numbers of reported deaths and some types of injuries from these shots, as of January 6, 2023.³
